THE LATIN-GERMAN LEXICON

Of Dr. C. F. Ingerslev.

By G. R. CARONS, D. D. and A. J. SCHEM, A. M.

One volume, royal octavo,

Price 43.

The authors of the present work had at first the intention of preparing for American Schools and Colleges a translation of the examinat Latin German School Lexicon of Prof. Ingersiev. The plan of the work seemed to them to be a decided improvement in Latin lexicoxisphy, and to meet more fully than its predictable of the work seemed to them to be a decided improvement in Latin lexicoxisphy, and to meet more fully than its predictable of the work seemed to them to be a decided in the provided at the strength of the series and of adding how own. They decided, therefore, to prepare an entirely hadependent work, using the lexicon of Ingerslev only as a basis. For tale purpose the whole of lexical flurature has been carefully examined—aspecially the recent works of Dr. W. Solita, Georges (the lexic efficient of 1855). Such and Kions-from all of which numerous suggestions have been derived and additions made.

The School Lexicon of Prof. Ingerslev has met, in Germany, with extraordinary success, as appears from the excontinum of eminent German scholars. The paises of the critics are especially bestowed upon the excellence of Ingerslev's pain. We have taken great pains to preserve for our work all of the characteristic features of this plan, and at the asme to improve it in the execution of details.

Flam acquainted with lingerslev's latin Lexicon, and believe it to be the heat of the many school lexicons now extent in Germany. Indeed, this is the testimeny of many of the best symmasial teachers, as well as many eminent scholars.

Whatever commendation may be given to Ingerslev is still more amply due to Crooks and Schem's Lexicon. I have examined a perion of the proof sheets, and have had the opportunity of personally knowing how carefully and on scienticously the authors have carried on the work throughout. Their book retains Ingerslev's perspicious arrangement; but in point of etymological matter, of attention to proper names, of discrimination in the general use of the naterial, and of adaptation to the wants of studens, it is far in advance of its German prottype. The work ought to find its way at once into all our classical schools, and into the lower college classes.

By DAVID W. BARTLETT.

Author of "What I saw in London," "Life of Lady Jane Grey," "Life of loan of Arc," etc.

With 33 Illustrations and Portraits, 315 pages 12mo. Price $1.

AUTHOR'S PERFACE.

"The contents of this volume are the results of two visits to Page; the first when Louis Nepoleon was President of the Republic, and the second when Napoleon III. was Emperor of France. I have sketched people and places and objects as I saw them at both periods, and the reader should bear this in mind.

"I have not endeavored to make a handbook to Paris, but have described those places and objects which came more particularly under my notice. I have she cribed those places and objects which came more particularly under my notice. I have also thought it best, instead of devoting my whole space to the description of places, or the manners of the people—a subject which has been pigtty well exhausted by other writers—to give a few sketches of the great men of Paris and of France; and among them, a few of the representative literary men of the past. There is not a general knowledge of Ferica literature and authors, either past or present, among the mass of readers; and Paris and France can only be truly known through French authors as differenture.

"My object has been to add somewhat to the general reader's knowledge of Feris and the Parislans, of the people and the place, whose social laws are the general guide of the civilized world."

The above Song is founded on the following striking incident:
A little child six, having a brother about eight sick unto death, dreamed that the angels told him that his brother would die and be taken away, but would return again. The poor luvalid dying six days after, the little child, on learning it, supposed his body had taken flight with his spirit. On being taken to see the corpes, he exclaimed, as be entered the room, "Oh there's Alle; the little angels told me he would come back and see ma." The touching thought is avought into peasant errees and set to make, which will go straight to every mother's heart who has a child among the angels. HAVE YOU READ COBB'S NEW SEA CHAMBERS'S JOURNAL for JULY now ready, and for sale by the agents, CHAS. S. FRANCIS & Co., No. 554 Broadway.
